

Securing Executive Cybersecurity Leadership for a Growing Fintech Amidst a Crisis

The Challenge:

Securing Leadership in a Cyber Crisis

A rapidly expanding fintech company faced an urgent cybersecurity crisis when a security breach exposed critical vulnerabilities in their cloud infrastructure. The stakes were particularly high given the company's position in the financial technology sector, where security incidents can severely impact both business operations and client trust.

It was evident that the company needed a Chief Information Security Officer (CISO), who could take immediate action to address existing vulnerabilities, build and lead a robust cybersecurity program, and implement enterprise-wide security protocols immediately.

However, sourcing a highly skilled CISO with deep expertise in cloud security and incident response under tight deadlines was a daunting task. Traditional hiring channels move too slowly, and competition for elite cybersecurity talent is fierce.

The KORE1 Solution:
Speed, Precision, and Industry Expertise

The Results:

A Game-Changing Cybersecurity Hire in Just Three Weeks

Within three weeks, the company successfully onboarded its new CISO, who immediately implemented new security protocols, prevented further security incidents, and established a foundation for long-term security success.

"KORE1's ability to move fast without sacrificing quality was critical. Their team understood our industry, our challenges, and the level of leadership we needed. Now, we have a world-class CISO who hasn't hesitated for a moment to strengthen our security posture. I can't believe how quickly they put us back on the right track."
